GRIEF: Carriage bears coffin of Sally Anne. Below, her family's tears as 18 doves are released

Doves of love for Sally Anne

THE tearful parents of murdered model Sally Anne Bowman watched as 18 white doves were released at her funeral yesterday.

Paul, 42, and Linda Bowman, 43, led mourners at Croydon Crematorium, south London. A white carriage pulled by two grey horses carried her white coffin to the service.

A recording of Sally Anne singing Celine Dion's My Heart Will Go On, from the film Titanic, was played. Sally Anne, 18, left, is feared to be the victim of a serial rapist after she was knifed to death six weeks ago.

CAR BOMB: 2 CHARGED

TWO alleged terrorists were in court yesterday charged with plotting a car bomb attack.

Waseem Mughal and Younis Tsouli, both 22, face 18 charges, including conspiracy to murder.

Among 10 charges Mughal faces, he is accused of possessing a DVD called "Martyrdom Operations Vest". Mughal, of Chatham, Kent, is accused of having two pieces of paper, one with the words "Welcome to Jihad" in Arabic and "Hospital = attack". Other charges relate to conspiring with Tsouli, of

by IAIN BURRELL

Shepherds Bush, west London, to murder and to cause an explosion in the UK.

Tsouli faces eight charges. He was allegedly found to have a "video slide film" on a computer hard drive showing how to make a car bomb.

Film

He is also accused of having another film showing a number of sites in Washington DC.

The men were charged after being held at the high-security Paddington Green Police Station for two weeks.

They appeared at London's

Bow Street Magistrates' Court with Tariq Al-Daour, 19, of Paddington, west London, who is charged with fund-raising offences for the purposes of terrorism.

He is also accused of receiving money or other property that he knew might be used for the purposes of terrorism. All three face charges of dishonestly obtaining property from credit cards belonging to others.

The men are were remanded in custody to appear before the Old Bailey on November 18.

None of the men is thought to be British-born.

Lucy

EXCLUSIVE

by KATE JACKSON

SIZZLING Star babe Lucy Pinder is all set to head Down Under to put a sparkle into the new series of I'm a Celebrity – but only if she can beat her fear of bugs.

ITV1 bosses are desperate to fly her to the Australian jungle for their reality show, which starts again in three weeks. But Lucy, 21, admits she's not sure she will be able to handle the stomach-wrenching Bushtucker trials.

"Lucy has had two meetings with ITV and they're really keen," says a close pal. "They have put in an offer for her to go, but the one thing holding her back is her fear of insects."

"It's not just a slight nervousness – she really has a phobia of all creepy-crawlies." Now Lucy may turn to hypnotherapy to enable her to join the show – and put male viewers in a trance.

DAPPER NAPPER: Boy George, now has a huge Star of David and a lotus flower tattooed on his head

George's star turn

by PETER DYKE

TROUBLED Boy George has gone to great lengths to prove he's still a star – by having one tattooed on his bald head.

The gay pop singer and nightclub DJ, who faces an American court date next month for possession of cocaine, was spotted out and about in London with the bizarre new head art.

The former Culture Club gender-bender has had the Jewish Star of David inked on top of his head and a huge red and orange Japanese lotus flower etched on the back.

George, 44, was all smiles as he left posh restaurant Nobu, but he may not be smiling much longer. If he is found guilty of the drugs charges he could face 15 years in an American jail.

Police arrested the Eighties superstar – real name George O'Dowd – last month after they were called to his New York flat to investigate an alleged burglary. During a search of the premises, the officers claimed to have found a quantity of cocaine.

George denied the drugs were his, but he must fly to the States for a December 19 court date.

BOOB MAN: Ozzy loves Shaz's bod

'Me and Ozzy are at it like rabbits'

SAUCY Sharon Osbourne has revealed her and hubby Ozzy are at it like "rabbits" between the sheets.

The raunchy X Factor judge says the couple have sex every night – and Ozzy, 56, can't get enough of her surgically-enhanced bod.

"Talking to other couples about sex as I got older I realised Ozzy is extremely highly sexed compared to a lot of them," said Sharon, 53.

"He's like a fing rabbit, truthfully. We have sex every night we're together. Every night."

"Sometimes I have to tell him I'm too tired, but he's never too tired."

The fiery mum-of-three also revealed a mind-boggling list of plastic surgery. It includes £100,000 spent on her face, £65,000 for her teeth, and £12,000 on her boob job. But that's just the start.

Cheeky

"It would cost £3 million I reckon, by the time you include all the extra costs for anaesthetists and so on," said Sharon.

"But it's definitely worth it! I've had my arms, my boobs, my stomach, my bum, my legs done."

"Ozzy does like my new boobs. He totally loves them actually."

"I feel much more sexually attractive for him – I suppose more like the kind of person he should have on his arm."

When Sharon faces the contestants in tonight's show, she'll see cheeky Chico Slimani desperately hoping he'll beat the axe by clinging on to his lucky sheep.

"I've got a lucky toy sheep which I've had with me ever since I made it through the auditions," the former goat-herd said last night.

"I need it more than ever before. I've been saved by the viewers before and the other week even Simon Cowell saved me – so I'm just hoping this isn't the end of my run."

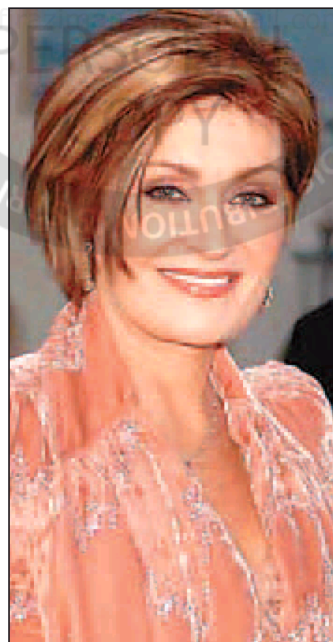

In the last 48 hours, bookies have made 34-year-old Chico the hot favourite for the boot tonight because they think he is the weakest link on the show.

He faced eviction on the very first live programme three weeks ago and was put in the firing line again last week following his rendition of the Ricky Martin hit La Vida Loca.

However, critics believe he will fall in the bottom two acts in the voting again tonight. And this time he'll be out.

But Chico – who will be singing the Prince hit Kiss tonight – is just hoping his lucky sheep will pull him through and save him for another week.

Last night a show source said: "Many of the finalists have got lucky charms with them which they believe are helping them stay in the contest. Andy from Journey South has some pink boxers which he always wears on the live show and believes keeps him and his brother Carl in the show.

"Brenda always touches her wedding ring before she performs to bring her good luck and so does newlywed Marla.

Fluffy

"Chico has his sheep and he is relying on his fluffy toy which he keeps in his bed every night to help him survive."

● X Factor is on ITV1 at 6.50pm tonight with the results show at 9.10pm.

lasses are among many thousands who have sent him texts, photos and e-mails, begging for a private performance.

And if his version of the Prince hit Kiss isn't good enough tonight, he'll be taking up their offers.

Ex-stripper Chico is certainly up for some action. Like the other contestants, he has been barred from any bedroom action by bosses of the ITV show.

Now he is convinced that viewers will vote him out tonight and is desperate to make up for lost time.

A show source said:

"Chico is already a star, even if he doesn't win. He's a true showman."

"His phone has been overloaded with messages and the TV studio has been swamped with letters from girls who want to get him into bed."

"He is a red-blooded guy and he's been having to keep all his sexual frustration inside. He's bursting for sex and, once he gets out, there will be no stopping him."

MI5 'DID KILL DI'

TOP telly spy thriller Spooks will claim next week that Princess Diana was murdered by MI5 agents.

BBC1 chiefs gave the go-ahead for the controversial fictional story to be screened on Thursday with real-life footage of Diana.

The chilling episode will weave known facts with fiction to present evidence that seems to show the shadowy men behind the death.

An insider said: "There have been so many conspiracy theories involving intelligence services' involvement in her death that we believe it's a valid subject for an episode."

NO SIGN: Search teams comb the rocks at Lulworth Cove in Dorset

TRAGEDY OF PALS SWEEPED OUT TO SEA

HOPES disappeared yesterday for two teenage boys swept off rocks by raging seas.

Police finally confirmed that a massive air, sea and land search had been downgraded to a "recovery" mission.

Clothes belonging to Matthew Myburgh, 16, and Charles Morrell, 15, were found about a mile from where the pair were dragged into the sea at Lulworth Cove, Dorset, on Thursday.

Their devastated families identified the items as belonging to one or both of the boys.

Chief Inspector Nick Maton, of Dorset Police said: "Searches will continue. We will return with under-water search units who will commence diving in the cove."

Tragedy

But Mark Rodaway of the Coastguard said: "Because of the sea conditions and the duration that we have been searching, a successful outcome is looking less likely."

He said the water temperature was 14C and a person could survive in such temperatures for only three hours without wearing survival equipment.

It's not clear why the pair were perched on the treacherous rocks as heavy rain and gusts of nearly 70mph battered the area. It is thought they may have been watching the waves or fishing.

A third teen, Richard Lawrence, 15, was with them and jumped into the sea to try to pull his pals to safety. But it was too dark to find them and he returned to shore to raise the alarm. He was said to be "utterly devastated" yesterday. The youngsters' families, from West Lulworth, near Swanage, had been waiting in a nearby hotel for news.

The father of one of the two victims broke down in tears as he visited the scene of the tragedy.

He had to be restrained by officers after attempting a dash across the rocks in a desperate bid to find his missing son.

A full-scale search and rescue operation was launched at around

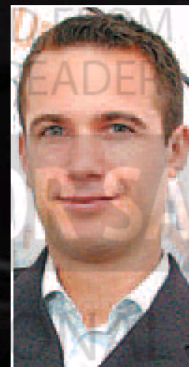

7.30pm on Thursday with more than 60 officers, three lifeboats and a helicopter used in the hunt.

Elsewhere there were fears of more flooding in large parts of Britain after widespread heavy rain and strong winds. The Lake District and north east England are said to be most at risk.

Insurers have called for improved flood defences as homeowners and businesses in high risk areas could not be guaranteed cover.

NOT A GOOD NIGHT: Boozy Clooney moments after brawling with Franks, despite the efforts of pal Lisa, right, to pull them apart. And the star still looks furious, inset below as he's led to his car

He brawls with boss at premiere bash

FURIOUS George Clooney got into a boozy brawl with a film boss who made a crack about his new movie at its glitzy premiere.

The hunk, 44, scuffled with the head of the distribution company handling his film Good Night And Good Luck.

His former girlfriend Lisa

■ by NADINE LINGE

Snowdon tried to pull him away as the men brawled in an alley.

A source said the star had snapped after exchanging "snide" comments and glances with Redbus executive Simon Franks, 33, all night - after he'd introduced Clooney on stage at London's Leicester Square.

Rage

He allegedly quipped: "We're glad to be representing this new film by George, though I don't know why."

Clooney spent the rest of the night simmering with rage. And as the men left the post-premiere party, at London bar Floridita, it all kicked off.

Our source said: "George took what Franks said as a personal insult."

"At the party, they were glaring at each other. Quite a bit of alcohol was being consumed."

too. Clooney left by the back door and bumped into Franks. He screamed, "I am going to f---ing have you!" and the pair started fighting, rolling around on the ground.

"Lisa was trying to pull him away. Security guards tried to separate the two men. Clooney was then bundled into a car and driven off."

He was taken to the airport to catch a flight back to LA.

Model and TV babe Lisa, 31, was a surprise guest, having split with Clooney earlier this year. She insisted: "I'm here to support a friend."

Clooney directed, co-wrote and stars in Good Night And Good Luck, set against the 1950s US communist witch-hunts, out here later this month.

Clooney last night claimed he was defending a woman. He said: "I won't stand by while someone is being insulted."

A Redbus spokesman said: "It's a storm in a teacup."

★ LADY Victoria Hervey proves she's a real souperstar in these exclusive pictures, posing with just a few tins of Campbell's to protect her modesty.

The 29-year-old caused a stir on a Malibu beach while promoting a new film Factory Girl, which tells the story of the mad world surrounding oddball pop artist Andy Warhol in 1960s New York.

★ Warhol, famed for his paintings of Campbell's soup cans, like the one above, will be played by Guy Pearce, 37.

Lady Victoria plays sexy socialite Baby Jane Holzer, who inspired much of Warhol's work.

★ Sienna Miller, 23, is said to have been signed up to play rival Warhol groupie Edie Sedgwick and Gwen Stefani, 35, is reported to be in talks to star as Edie's friend Richie Berlin.

The film is due to be released next year.

EastEnders' bruise brothers recover from their beltings

by NIGEL PAULEY

BATTERED telly hard-man Ross Kemp and his wife Rebekah Wade were all smiles again yesterday.

EastEnders Ross, 41 and Sun editor Rebekah, 37, put on a united front as they left their £1million south London home together.

Meanwhile, pals admitted yesterday that their marriage was "not perfect".

The pair kept mum about an early-hours bust-up which ended with the tough guy actor suffering a cut lip and police being called.

Flame-haired Rebekah was arrested and held in custody for eight hours on suspicion of assault - before being released without charge.

Close friends hinted that the high-profile couple had been having problems in their three-year marriage.

Stormy

PR guru Max Clifford, 62, said: "They are still together, but things are not perfect."

"It is very embarrassing for both of them, who have been together a long while and they get on together incredibly well most of the time."

Other pals also admitted that Kemp and Wade - close friends of the Blairs and other Labour luvvies - enjoyed a "stormy relationship".

A mutual friend said: "They've had their problems and their ups and downs like any other couple. I've seen Ross getting a real ear-bashing over the phone from his other half on occasions." The couple were all smiles yesterday. And our coverage of the incident also had the country grinning.

Telly and radio stations highlighted our front page telling the tale of how TV tough guys Kemp and Steve McFadden, 46, were beaten up by women.

Police arrived at the Battersea home of Rebekah and Ross on Thursday after two early morning 999 calls made in quick succession.

In the first she claimed: "I'm being assaulted," then hung up.

Before police could trace the call, Kemp also dialled 999 and claimed he was under attack.

Officers found the Grant Mitchell actor nursing a cut lip - but he refused medical treatment.

Rebekah's immediate future as editor seems secure - she went out for a meal with the Sun's owner Rupert Murdoch on Thursday night.

Clifford said: "Rebekah is extremely relieved that Murdoch is talking to her like a father and is concerned about her marriage."

She has described the argument that led to her arrest as "a silly row which got out of hand" - while Ross said it was a "fuss about nothing".

GRUMPY: McFadden and little Mollie yesterday

STEVE McFadden refused to comment on his bust-up with ex-lover Angela Bostock yesterday.

Bostock, 29, the mother of his two children, was cautioned after belting McFadden, 46, outside her home in Haringey, north London on Thursday.

Eyewitnesses said she launched herself at McFadden, who plays Ross Kemp's on-screen brother Phil

Mitchell in EastEnders, and struck him in the face in front of officers.

McFadden refused to comment as he left home yesterday with his daughters - before heading to the studio. He had marks on his cheek and an onlooker said: "He looked quite grumpy."

Bostock was keeping a low profile yesterday.

TELLY lover Tony Blair is to sidestep serious issues again today - by appearing on Football Focus.

Days after his top ally David Blunkett was forced out and fresh questions were raised about his leadership, the PM will spend this lunchtime talking about Newcastle United's clash with Birmingham.

He'll join presenter Manish Bhasin and guests Mark Lawrenson and John Motson at 12.10pm on BBC1.

It's not the first time Mr Blair has sought refuge in the TV studio.

Last year, in the run-up to the election, he sparked a storm by regularly popping up on entertainment shows.

He went on Richard and Judy and was quizzed at Downing Street by Gateshead schoolboys Little Ant and Dec - James Pallister and Dylan McKenna Redshaw - for Saturday Night Takeaway.

He also sat on the GMTV sofa and was given a kicking over Iraq by teenagers in a Channel 4 T4 special.

Hops 'n robbers

A ONE-legged bandit robbed a student at knife-point in a busy street.

Wheelchair-bound Mark Milverton, 25, approached terrified Mark Burnell, 21, in Weston-super-Mare, Somerset, and demanded he hand over cash or he would stab him. The victim gave £5 in loose change before Milverton wheeled himself away.

Bristol Crown Court heard Milverton, from Weston, had an "appalling" criminal record. His leg was amputated due to years of drug abuse. He was jailed for three and a half years.

Det Con Paul Smith said: "Milverton is dangerous despite his disability."

OUR NUMBER RON

THE Two Ronnies have been voted the best ever comedy duo in a survey, beating Morecambe and Wise and Laurel and Hardy.

QUICKIE..

FORMULA 1 hunk Jenson Button, 25, was bombarded with offers of recording contracts by the big cheeses at the MTV Europe Awards in Lisbon. An insider said: "He was offered deals which made his current salary look paltry. But they didn't even ask if he could sing!"

QUICKIE..

IMPOSSIBLY pretty actor Jared Leto, 33, landed himself in hot water with MTV's Dave Berry when he tried to chat up his Sugababe fiancée Heldi Range. Jared asked Heldi, 22, if she fancied going to LA with him. Dave sent him packing – but it was red faces all round later when they met in a bar.

QUICKIE..

AMERICAN legends Green Day made Coldplay look like the last of the rock 'n' roll hellraisers at the MTV Europe awards. The band spent more than £30,000 on macrobiotic food, probiotic drinks and herbal teas while Coldplay did Blighty proud by ordering beer, fags and junk food.

QUICKIE..

JAKE Gyllenhaal, 24, was so angry after chipping a tooth filming a stunt in new flick Jarhead he beat up a co-star. "For some reason I got mad and started hitting him. We didn't even talk for a month after that," he said.

ROBBIE'S SHAGGY LESSONS

He asks rapper for love tips

WHEN charm, charisma and good looks don't bag the gal of your dreams, what's a guy to do?

That was Robbie Williams' dilemma as he faced another career high alone, without the partner he desperately craves.

So, after a fraught night in the plush Four Seasons hotel in Lisbon ahead of the MTV Awards, he decided to take action.

Our Rob, 31, had been complaining to friends about his dead-in-the-water love life.

Nuts

But we can reveal that only minutes before joking to the press that he was crap in bed, he was asking for help from Mr Loverman himself.

Yes, Rob turned to 37-year-old rap sensation Shaggy – known to his nearest and dearest as Orville Richard Burrell – for tips on bagging the lady of his dreams. And the ex-Marine amazingly told the Robster – who wowed crowds with a fab rendition of his new single Tripping – that he needs to be more confident.

Our source told us: "Rob made a beeline for Shaggy and told him he thought he was the nuts when it came to smooth-talking the ladies."

"Shaggy just laughed initially because Robbie is clearly such a hit with women."

"But Rob said his superstar persona doesn't always translate to his personal life, Shaggy said Rob should be more confident and told him, 'Assume every woman wants you and they probably will.'"

In Robbie's case that is probably true. But the down-to-earth star doesn't seem to realise it.

He told pals over drinks on Wednesday night about his hopes of furthering a relationship with a girl he met in New York.

Fears

And he complained he fears his dream of becoming a dad soon could be slipping away.

Our mole explained: "Like anyone, Rob would just like someone to share his life with and yes, he'd like to be a dad."

Hopefully, the Shaggy treatment will help.

We hear Shaggy also gave the ex-Take That star a few tips that can't be revealed in a family newspaper.

"Shaggy definitely made Rob blush," our mole added.

How odd – that's rather the same effect he has on us...

SPOTTED

HUSH HUSH

WHICH camp singer leads a double life as a gay sex-addict in virtual online world Everquest? The star has always concealed his true sexuality. But the man who is dating him in the game has discovered his virtual boyfriend's identity and is threatening to dish the dirt unless he comes out of the closet.

BORAT'S ENOUGH

AFTER Sacha Baron Cohen appeared as his alter-ego Borat at the MTV Awards – in this delightful yellow number – we can understand why his fiancée Isia Fisher refused to be seen with him.

But the funnyman, 34, was devastated at the after-party in Lisbon when the former Home And Away beauty ignored him and caroused with girlfriends.

Stunning redhead Isia, 29, explained later that the comedy genius is painfully shy unless he's in character.

But she fears that his inability to be himself will mean that she will be marrying Borat – or Sacha's other alter-ego Ali G – when they walk down the aisle next year.

MAD LIKES A PRAYER

MADONNA'S performance at the MTV Awards might have looked like a flashback to her Erotica days.

But backstage it was all about her new spirituality as she performed Kabbalah blessings.

The 47-year-old, left, who wore £20,000 worth of diamonds on her eyelashes, presumably just because she can, got everyone pepped up for the show with a few prayers. Our insider said: "Madonna was ensuring everyone was in a Zen place before they stepped out."

"She was doing blessings and prayers with her dancers and many of the other artists became interested and got involved."

"Shakira in particular was very interested."

HAVE YOU GOT SOME JUICY GOSSIP FOR US?

Liz's tale of two Kitties

NATASHA Hamilton's mushy feelings for Fran Cosgrave have rubbed off on her former bandmate Liz McLarnon, who is desperate to be as loved up as they are.

Ex-Atomic Kitten Liz, 23, played gooseberry at a showbiz bash at Liverpool's Sir Thomas Hotel, where Tash, 23, and Celebrity Love Island winner Fran, 27, ensured everybody knew how smitten they are. Liz is in awe of the couple, who have three-year-old son Josh, because they are set to get wed. She said: "They're so beautiful together. It was meant to be. I want something like that."

Provide your pals with sick bags first, love...

HAPPY COUPLE: Fran and Natasha and, right, bandmate Liz

THIS IS IT FOR DANNI

LOVELY Danni Minogue, 34, likes Blighty so much she might buy a home in London, where she was pictured arriving at nightclub Living Room. An insider said: "She loves the British. She likes our culture, our architecture, our sense of humour. She even likes our unpredictable seasons." Stewth, Danni, you'll never be a true Brit unless you learn to moan about the weather.

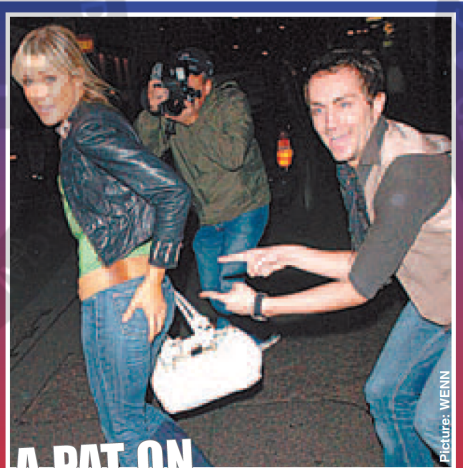

Reese fans prove point

POINTY-faced actress Reese Witherspoon was all smiles at the Tinseltown premiere of her new movie Walk The Line. She gave a scary grin as she was rapturously applauded for her portrayal of the late Johnny Cash's wife June Carter. The 26-year-old said: "It's such a relief, June took all the awful things that happened on the chin."

Well you've certainly got the chin for it Reese...

A PAT ON THE BACK FOR KATE

IT seems Kate Lawler hopes to be the new bottom of Asda. Kate, 25, wouldn't leave her barely-there bum alone during a night out in Soho, London. Get some pies down you love, then maybe you'll have a rear to slap in those supermarket ads...

Surprise hits of the week

HERE I was, thinking that the big fight this week was going to be between David Cameron and David Davis on Question Time. I never thought it would feature the Mitchell brothers.

And I certainly didn't think they'd get a slap from a lady. Not both on the same day, anyway.

It's a case of being careful what you wish for, I suppose. Ross Kemp has always wanted to show that he doesn't have to play tough guys all the time. Well take a bow, Ross, you've done it!

When the news came through that Steve McFadden had been hit by a girl as well, I just assumed that someone had made a mistake on the internet.

Perhaps, I thought, the same person was behind both attacks and it was some bizarre anti-EastEnders Happy Slapping campaign. Or maybe it was nothing to do with EastEnders and it was just Happy Slaphead Slapping.

The mind boggles. Perhaps Steve's ex-partner Angela Bostock had heard the news about Kemp getting battered and had a wonderful sense of humour. Or maybe she thought this was the one day she might get away with it and it wouldn't appear in the papers.

The fact that the Kemp shenanigans featured a tabloid newspaper editor makes it all the more embarrassing.

Or does it? When you've already had a paediatrician get his house burned down because of a "name and shame" paedophile campaign you've irresponsibly started in a newspaper, this is probably nought but a playground scuffle in comparison.

So it was with a sense of anticlimax I tuned into the Question Time Special with David Cameron and David Davis in debate.

When I first saw the studio, I actually thought I'd tuned into The Weakest Link - Tory Special. Only I'd turned on late and missed the ejection of Fox, Clarke and Rifkind.

And if this had been a gameshow, David Davis would have gone home with the shiny new car. Yes, just when you think Young Dave has it sewn up, Old Dave has an absolute stormer.

He had impressive stats at his beck and call, claiming: "The tax burden is the highest for 25 years...the growth of the economy has halved...as a result, Gordon Brown will have a £10 billion hole in his spending plan." That's a big hole. Those are big statements.

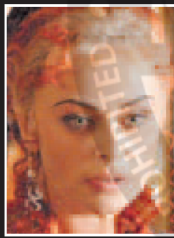

He had other ear-catching phrases: "I want us to be the champions of state failure," was one. "This is the only Prime Minister in history who's sacked two people twice," was another. He even had a sparkly purple tie to make him look a bit funky.

By contrast, Cameron had a sweaty forehead and very thin lips. Which he chewed now and again. This disappointed me. I want a Tory leader who will wolf down New Labour, not bits of himself.

He was accused by someone in the audience of being full of waffle and, sadly, did nothing to disprove this.

On the other hand, Bill Clinton in his prime could not have topped Davis.

I still think Cameron would have a better crack at becoming PM. But, after Thursday night, I fear he has as much chance of being chosen as Tory leader as Ross Kemp does of getting any more SAS roles.

ROME'S BEST

HAVING seen the BBC's new historical bonkathon Rome - with Polly Walker, left, excelling as randy Atia - and bearing in mind the phrase about doing as Romans do, there is only one place I'm considering going on my holiday next year.

Don't cry for 'poor' Blunk

WHY has David Blunkett said he will NOT return to the Cabinet? Surely if he resigns three times, he gets some kind of award?

And before we shed too many tears, remember that the shares he holds in DNA Bioscience are worth £15,000 now. When the firm floats on the stock-market, they could be worth £400,000. And now he's quit, he no longer has to sell them.

Like football managers, getting the sack/resigning is one of the most lucrative career moves open to a politician.

Blunkett will even get £18,700 as a resignation payoff. I've resigned from a few jobs in my time. I've been lucky if they've let me keep the stapler.

One thing that fascinates me about these things is the fact that they have to write a resignation letter.

My resignations have never involved letters. Normally, it's just two words, the second one of them being "thisforagamesofsoldiers".

Bizarre thing about the affair was the reaction from certain sections of the press, who talked about how "dignified" Blunkett was.

Dignified? I lost count of the number of times he said that he didn't think he'd done anything that merited resigning.

He broke the rules again and again. And was caught. What is "dignified" about that? Fair enough if you think he was a good sort, but spare me the handwringing "dignified" crap.

And I don't reckon he's THAT smart. After all, he was accused of receiving three letters warning him that he shouldn't have that DNA job. Why didn't he just say he never saw them?

FASHION POLICE: Trinny, right, and Susannah

Carol's a touch of class

THIS Christmas will see a rash of celeb books on the shelves. Jamie Oliver's Italy will jostle for space with the offering from Trinny and Susannah, Look Different, Feel Different, Act Different. Or you can buy different and go for the best named celeb gift ever: Carol Vorderman's Touch Screen Sudoku. I swear if that puzzle hadn't come along, that would have sounded like the most bizarre naughty movie ever.

SCRAMBLED EGGS TAKING THE SITH

I'M as geeky as the next geek. I love gadgets, games, Buffy and little bits of techno-jiggery pokery. But I must confess I am a tad bamboozled by the point of these "Easter Eggs" on DVDs.

These are hidden extras, like the Breakdancing Yoda clip from Revenge Of The Sith, featured in this paper on Thursday. To access it you first have to go to the language select page (not something you'll ever do in the first place unless you have a cousin visiting from Guatemala).

Now assuming your cousin is over from those exotic climes and you're on that page, now you have to highlight the THX logo. Why would you do that?

THX is the brand name for the swanky sound that Lucas uses in his film. The only people that would highlight that are the kind that build canoes out of insects in their spare time.

But assuming for a second that you're in both of those categories, you then have to type in 1138. This is a reference to Lucas's first film, which was called THX1138.

Who the hell is going to find that by accident? No one. So it's just a silly little thing put in there to get geeks in a sweat. And that's not a nice image. Ask my missus.

(Note to my missus and kids: If you're wondering where I am, Battlefront 2 came out this week on PlayStation - the sequel to the game that lets you re-enact Star Wars battles. I'm in a secret location until I complete the thing.)

I love them both says junkie rocker Doherty

PETE: I HAVE 2nd SECRET LOVE CHILD

PLEA: Kate Moss, above, wants Pete to go to the celeb clinic in Arizona where she was treated DRUGGIE rocker Pete Doherty has revealed he has a second secret love child.

The wildman singer blurted out that he has fathered two children, including his two-year-old son with punk singer Lisa Moorish.

Pete, who has had an on-off relationship with supermodel Kate Moss, admitted: "I've got two."

The Babyshambles frontman told how he is only in touch with Estelle, his son with Lisa, 33.

"Poor little fker. My sister sees him all the time so there's affection as a family for him," he said.

"I don't really want to go into that because it's not fair on the kids or the mother."

High

"It's enough for me to say I love them and would do anything for them."

The revelation could have been a result of his drug addictions after Pete, 26, laid bare his secret during an interview while he was on a narcotics high. He had also just

by MARIANNA PARTASIDES

daubed the walls of his hotel room with the words Rough Trade written in fresh blood.

The revelation was even a surprise to his spokesman Tony Linkin, who was present during the interview, and said: "I have no idea if he has another child or not. If he does I don't know about it. Whether he made it up or not, I don't know."

Pete, son of a posh Army major, has been in and out of trouble for his drug-fuelled bad behaviour, including a stint in Pentonville Prison earlier this year.

He was also thrown into cells after a wild gig in Shrewsbury.

Fix

Pete has anti-heroin implants but admitted he is still hooked on other drugs.

And he said he can't go for even a day without a fix. He said: "If I can't go 24 hours without having a hit, then I'm never in reality going into rehab voluntarily."

But Pete is now toying with the idea after Kate pleaded with him. One-time lover Kate, 31, lost several modelling contracts last month after she was caught on camera snorting cocaine.

The mum-of-one has just finished a month at the world famous celeb clinic The Meadows in Arizona.

Pete said: "She's doing really well. She wants me to go to this place in Arizona and do it. I just miss her."

"She says she doesn't know why I love her. I don't know why she loves me, but that's the way it is."

MUM: Lisa Moorish

£3m for star's son

THE 12-year-old son of former Chelsea footballer Nigel Spackman was awarded £3million yesterday for brain damage he suffered shortly after his birth in hospital.

Frazer Spackman developed jaundice at Heatherwood Hospital in Ascot, Berks, and now has cerebral palsy, deafness and speech problems. His mum Nicola, 44, alleged doctors were negligent in failing to treat the jaundice. The hospital denied liability but agreed to pay the damages.

Deepcut in clear

THREE young Army recruits who died at Deepcut barracks were NOT murdered, a re-investigation report concluded yesterday.

But Surrey police were criticised for not paying enough attention to individual details of the deaths of Privates Sean Benton, 20, Cheryl James, 18, and Geoff Gray, 17.

And the Independent Police Complaints Commission will now study some documents from the case.

Net nut poses as Jen

by NIGEL PAULEY

TV BABE Jennifer Ellison told last night how a sick internet stalker is making her life hell by stealing her name.

The deranged cyber-nut is pretending to be the former Brookside star to send out bizarre fake e-mails and make damaging claims.

The phoney Jen has claimed to be so desperate to join the BBC's EastEnders that she had written a begging letter to soap supremo John Yorke, 43.

Her "dream" of joining the soap was reported by Sky News and on celebrity websites, backed up by her supposedly real quotes.

Sinister

Last night Hell's Kitchen winner Jen, 22, fumed: "It's all rubbish. I don't know why they are doing this. I never use computers."

"Someone's trying to ruin my life - but they won't succeed."

Even Jen's own official website has been taken in by the impostor.

And there have been more sinister incidents which the star's spokeswoman preferred to keep private.

"We've got no idea why this person is doing it other than to get a sick thrill," said the spokeswoman.

"We can only conclude that someone is out to hurt Jen."

She dismissed suggestions that the impostor managed to steal Jennifer's log-on.

"Jennifer hasn't a clue how to use a computer and never sends e-mails," she said.

£1m FOOTIE FRAUDSTER

He stole top stars' names

FAKE CLAIMS: Omaniya Alabi

AN illegal immigrant who used football stars' names to fiddle more than £1million in benefits was jailed for three years yesterday.

Omaniya Alabi, 41, used a string of fake names - including David Seaman, Ashley Cole and David James - to make his bogus claims.

The Nigerian was jailed for the same scam in 2001 and had been deported from the UK twice but sneaked back in to carry on his con.

Jailing him yesterday, Judge Stanley Spence described him as a "sophisticated fraudster".

Reading Crown Court heard he faced charges relating to £600 of the housing benefit payments he had fiddled but investigators believed his elaborate fraud probably earned him £1million. He used at least 19 fake names - many borrowed from famous footballers - to make benefit claims.

Since 1994, he had been convicted of 41 offences and benefits fraud officials were not even sure whether Alabi was his real name.

Sneaked

He was arrested in July this year for motoring offences and gave his name as Kevin Chapman.

But his fingerprints revealed he was a convicted fraudster who had sneaked into the UK and was living in Bracknell, Berks.

He admitted five charges of deception in court yesterday.

Tetteh Turkson, defending, said Alabi was addicted to drugs and gambling and realised he faced deportation again on his release from jail.

CHEQUE MATES

● Bankers top lovers ● Brickies too bushed

BORING bankers make the best lovers.

And they are also the most adventurous – with a huge passion for outdoor nookie.

The pin-stripe brigade even beat hunky brickies when it comes to sex – because graft on the building site leaves them too bushed to perform.

"They may be stuck behind a desk all day but it seems they have more energy left over to lavish on their ladies," said a spokesman for the poll carried out among 5,000 men.

The survey found almost half of our civil servants enjoy al fresco romps, while most teachers prefer to stick to the safety of their bedrooms.

And bankers, including accountants, think of romping more often than anyone else.

They leave electricians, builders and plumbers lagging behind when it comes to saucy sessions.

A massive 66% of tradesmen say they only think about sex once or twice a day.

And 62% let their other halves do all the work between the sheets – because they are shattered.

But a whopping 75% of accountants dream about sex at least 10 times a day and 67% say outdoors is their favourite place for it.

The survey rated professions in order of raunchiness with accountants on top, civil servants second and racy salesman in third place.

A spokesman for Loaded magazine, who carried out the poll, added: "Blokes everywhere can look to their example – don't over-exert yourself at work and conserve your vigour for the bedroom."

STAR NEWS

Telly is tot stuff

TELLY is GOOD for youngsters.

The under-sevens benefit from watching shows like Balamory, The Tweenies and Teletubbies because they gain "life skills and understanding".

Sheffield University researchers found young children view two hours a day.

It helped them communicate and they often danced and sang along.

Goggle of beer

CHILDREN are being shown the dangers of binge-drinking – through beer goggles.

The special glasses let them know what it feels like to get drunk without touching a drop.

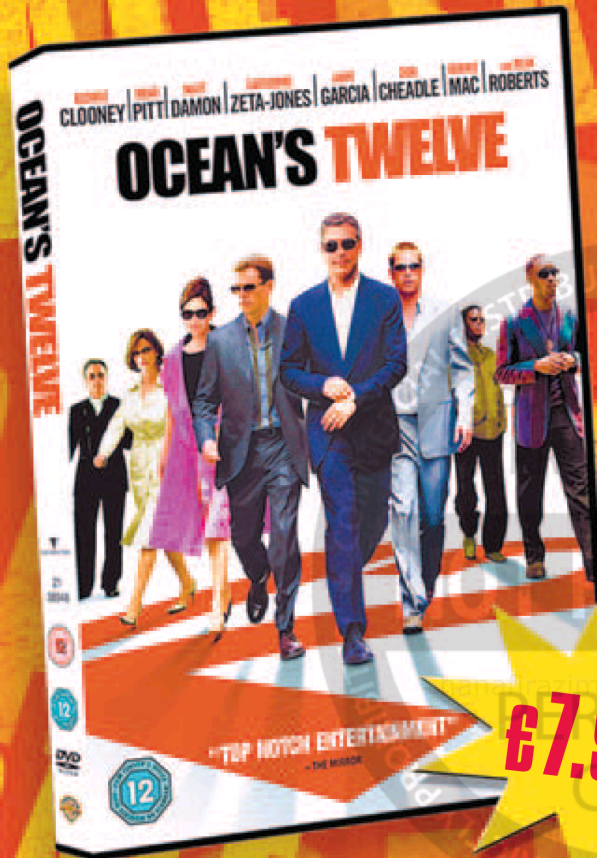

The idea, funded by the Portman Group, which promotes responsible drinking, was tested on Manchester teens.

Lucy Lawton, 15, said: "The glasses really distort your vision. It's difficult and dangerous just to walk."

Petra's a red devil

CZECH model Petra Nemcova looked red hot at a New York charity bash. Pretty Petra, 26, joined celebs like singer Sting, 54, to raise money for farming projects.
